THE LOVE OF LULU AND LEANDER—POOR LEANDER!

1 LULU: "Oh, Leander, it is so kind of you to teach me how to understand politics."
LEANDER (aside): "Now here's where I throw Onthespot in the shade. He sits there and tells a weak would-be funny story while I expound the mysteries of politics to her. She can't help but appreciate my mental superiority!"

2 LEANDER: "Yes, and then each party goes onto convention and forms a platform!"
LULU: "The different parties use a different kind of wood in their platforms, I suppose."
CHARLEY ONTHESpot: "Then the tramp knocks at the door and out walks a tall, sour-faced, angular female!"

3 LEANDER: "No, no, Lulu; you don't understand. Well, now, the Imperialists!"
LULU: "Popper has a friend who is an imperialist—he wears an imperial on his chin. What kind of a female was she, Charley?"
CHARLEY: "So the tramp says, 'Lady, will you please give me a bite?'"

4 LEANDER: "Not not Lulu, will you please pay attention! Now, one of the great issues is the trusts!"
LULU: "Why, our groceryman must be in politics. He has a sign up 'NO TRUST.' Then what did the female say, Charley?"
CHARLEY: "Then the female said, 'SURE I can. Here, Sport!'"

5 LEANDER: "No! Lulu, PLEASE pay attention to ME! Then the party managers!"
LULU: "Oh, I understand. It's like theatres. They all have managers. Go on, Charley. And she said, 'Here, Sport!'"
CHARLEY: "And a ferocious bulldog rushed out and—"

6 CHARLEY: "gave him the greatest bite of his life! Ho! ho! ho! Ha! ha! ha!"
LULU: "Oh, Charley! Ha! ha! ha! ha! ha! Oh, dear me!"
LEANDER (aside): "Ye gods of war! I'll become demented. I should have known! Women and brains don't mix!"

HOW TO COLOR YOUR OWN PHOTOGRAPHS AT HOME

MISS THERESA ISELIN
TINTED BY PHILIP MOOK.

THE DIRECTIONS.

(Copyright, 1904, by Philip Mook, Artist-Photographer.)

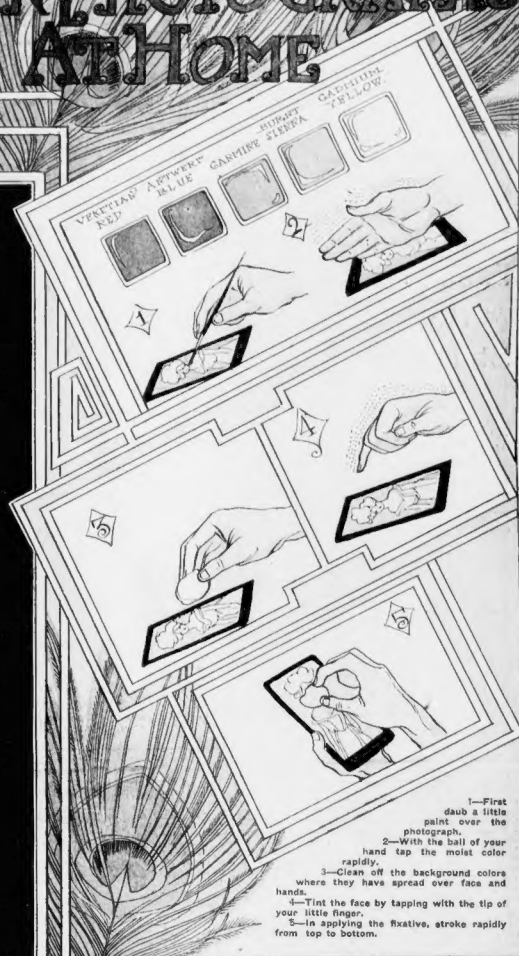

WITH one or two water colors, a tumbler of water, a smooth piece of linen and a little cotton, anybody will find the coloring of photographs a most simple and delightful pastime, artistic and profitable as well.

There is nothing difficult about obtaining the most delicate tints and shading. The beginner may not find his first attempt to be a perfect success. For that reason I would suggest that the preliminary trials be made at the expense of an old photograph.

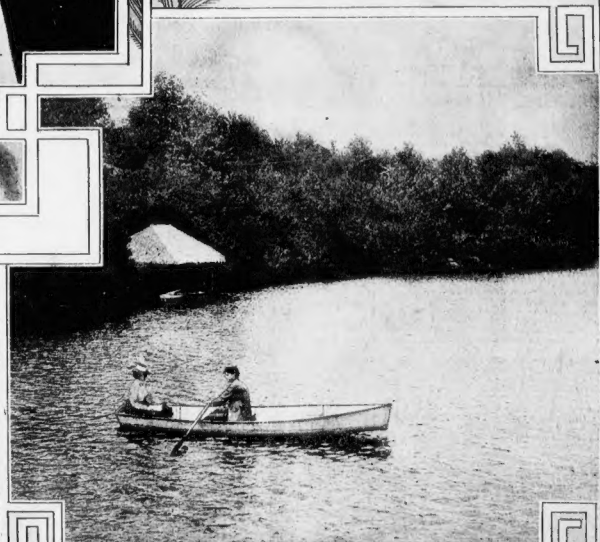

To begin with, let me tell you the one great secret of coloring photographs. The colors are to be applied with the palm of the hand and with the tip of the finger, instead of with a brush—a quick, tapping motion being all that is required to distribute the color smoothly and evenly over the desired surface. The finest brush gives a very coarse finish compared to the smoothness and evenness obtained by using the palm of the hand or the tip of the finger.

To equip yourself with a full complement of the articles needful to the photograph colorer you should have a palette for mixing your colors on. In the absence of a regular palette a piece of glass, such as an old negative, will be found to answer the purpose just as well. You also need a moistening

- 1—First daub a little paint over the photograph.
- 2—With the ball of your hand tap the moist color rapidly.
- 3—Clean off the background colors where they have spread over face and hands.
- 4—Tint the face by tapping with the tip of your little finger.
- 5—In applying the fixative, stroke rapidly from top to bottom.

Not long ago Mr. Henry Blase, a member of the Second Regiment, National Guard of New Jersey, was severely burned in a naphtha explosion. The regiment's colonel called a meeting of his men and asked for volunteers willing to provide a portion of the skin for their comrade. With one accord the whole of the regiment stepped out of line, and eventually twenty-two of them were operated upon. The subsequent grafting on to the body of Mr. Blase was entirely successful.

A much more extraordinary feat, of course, was that which required the aid of a Mr. Strickland, of Clinton, O. The creature used this time was a rabbit, and the new rabbit was the same one to read and to see everything just as well as if he had never lost his sight.

Attention is now being directed to the aetiology and spread of the disease, and while a search for the causative agent is at work to endeavor to track the disease to its initial causation, any new site of origin is of great interest to the profession. I have therefore taken this opportunity of drawing attention to a mode of causation—namely, the spread of the disease—in the immediate neighbourhood of the breast, which at first is not in the breast and only spreads to the breast secondarily or by extension contact. Two cases of this kind of origin have recently been under my care.

The site where the earphone attacks occurred was the same place, namely to the point where the upper edge of a corner crossed the edge of the porch. The earphone attacks occurred on the right side in each case and in women whose right ear was closer to the porch than the right arm and in consequence to an excessive friction of the right edge of the porch against the right ear. In all three cases the point of friction was the same, namely at the point indicated by the letter "a" in the diagram. In the case of the extremely nervous development of the earphone attacks, the ear was always the same, namely the right ear. I have never seen the blower of a vacuum cleaner cause earphone attacks.

The second case was that of an unmarried woman, aged fifty-five years, who was married for twenty years. Her husband was a carpenter. Her parents were born on November 6, 1900, and she played for thirty-five years in a laundry. She had been married for twenty years over the lines for thirty hours every week. In appearance she was a tall, rather slight woman, with a pale complexion, blue eyes, and on one occasion an abscess of the ear. dropped to the ground, while the blood-flecked tangle of flesh, hair and skin continued whirling around and around the shaft until the machinery was stopped.

When the ambulance was ambled to the Hahnemann Hospital, where the house surgeon, Dr. J. W. Swoy, displayed rare good judgment by doing exactly the same thing as Dr. Swoy had done in the past, to Dr. Swoy Miss Stewart is indebted not only for her rapid recovery, but for her new scalp and hair as well.

When the ambulance was presented, "wheeling" such as she was lifted out of the ambulance and carried direct to the operating room. From just above the eye, a deep, jagged, and ugly wound ran sideways from ear to ear the scalp was gone, exposing the bare skull. Scarcely a particle of flesh was left on top of the

Just as Dr. Sooty was preparing a hasty diagnosis of her injuries they recalled to his mind an account of a somewhat similar accident which occurred in Germany a few years ago. He remembered reading about the case in a medical publication and it had impressed itself upon his memory, because it stated that a dog's scalp had been successfully grafted to the skull of the injured man.

From there the animal was removed to the operating room, anesthetized and laid on the operating table, with its head almost touching that of the patient, who had also been anesthetized.

"You can't understand," said Dr. Koo after the operation, "that the dog's skull was not removed boldly and seen down to the brain. The reason for this operation as that would have been very simple and useless, compared with what actually had to be done.

"The operation was to maintain a circulation in the scalp all the time the transfer was being made. This was the only way in which the skin could be kept alive and healthy.

"So a long strip was first lifted on three sides from the dog's head and laid over across the Stewart's skull and then the rest of the scalp was lifted up by being pulled forward and down the right side. In this way, by not entirely severing the strip of skin from the dog's head until it had been attached to Stewart's skull, the circulation was maintained and skin was kept alive. Strip after strip was cut from the dog's head and neck in the manner and sewed across Miss Stewart's skull.

"When the wound had been partly covered the dog's skin was sewed down with what is known as a continuous suture. More skin was added and stitched down until the wound was almost entirely covered. The main object during the operation was, as I have said, to maintain the circulation. We knew that the animal was to deluging, because the dog's skin has taken root on top of the young woman's head, and is growing and spreading, at the rate of a mile an hour.

"This hair is, of course, dog hair. It will not grow to normal length, not more than three-quarters of an inch at the very best."

"Some people might possibly object to the head of dog hair, but Miss Stewart, who is recovering rapidly from the effects of her shock, has already said that she has no philosophical remark that it will be better than no hair at all. If she does not like it after it has grown long enough to be seen, she can have it cut off. And if it still seems with disfavor she can easily wear a wig."

In a statement made a few days later Dr. Snow said that Miss Stewart's condition was such that she would not be able to tion was so much improved that the operation may now be regarded as a complete success.

'We are now gradually removing the dog skin from the patient's forehead and grafting in its place small patches of human skin taken from the arms of Miss Stewart and some of her friends. This will give her a nice white forehead, preferable, of course, to one covered with dog skin. This second operation is, of course, only one of the necessary ones.

Three strips are then bound to the surface by a piece of antiseptic rubber tubing. The strips are then pressed against the faces adhere. This takes from two to three days, and we expect to give Miss Brewster an entirely new forehead in three or four days.

"The patient's general condition is very good. She is of a cheerful disposition, at times a little irritable, but that is all. Her diet is a great satisfaction to her."

Dr. H. H. Haskins, the attending physician, took place, is already receiving letters and telegrams from medical men all over the country and from Europe, asking him for the latest particulars about this unusual case.

After the operation, the Newfoundland dog, who had unwillingly sacrificed his scalp, was mercifully put to death. Miss Stewart had begged that if there was any possible way in which to save the dog that he be given every care. The doctor decided that the animal would always be a sufferer if they prolonged his life, so they put him to death painlessly.

Although Miss Stewart is the first person in this country to whose skull the seal-skin has been attached, it must be grafted, and in instances where the skin of animals has been used for grafting, the place of plasmal was grafted recently. The patient was treated by Dr. J. H. Grant, at Bloomington, Mo. She had been badly burned by a lamp explosion, it was necessary that a certain amount of skin be grafted. The patient was told to save her life, and as none of her relatives would consent to be operated upon, the surgeon, misled by a bright idea, sent her to a hospital where she was operated upon, performed and deprived of sufficient skin to cover the burned part of the patient's body. The operation was entirely satisfactory. From the hospital she was sent back on the arm of a patient who had been twenty-five square inches of skin thrown off by a lamp explosion. Four days after the operation the dog was taken home, forming a red, healthy epidermis.

The first case was that of a single woman, aged forty-seven years, who was admitted under my care in Guy's Hospital on October 30, 1901. Her parents, who were both living and healthy at an advanced age and previously to her admission, her general health had been always good, but she was a worker in a fur factory and her employment for years had been so arduous fur of their skins with a blunt knife and to draw out all the long hairs and reduce them to a uniform length. The skins were then laid out to dry on alms and other valuable furs. For many years every day her arm was carried backwards and forwards in this way, and she was so much distressed by the work that she learned over her bench pressed the alms together and used the pressure of her fingers unjustly against the upper portion of her corset.

In March, 1900, the patient first noticed a hard swelling about the size of a fist, situated above, and to the outer side of her right thigh. It continued to increase in size, and was accompanied by a throbbing and aching pain, except when the swelling was pressed or pinched or pressed upon. After a time she noticed that the pressure of the corset was very painful, and she was obliged to leave off wearing it. She was then admitted to the hospital, and before admission the lump broke down and be-

The tumor formed a depression of about the size of a quarter by its firm adhesion to the skin, but was freely movable beneath.

On November 10 an anæsthetic was administered and the tumor was excised. The incision was carried on into the axilla and the gland was excised. The tumor recurred.

I have placed these two cases together for comparison, and it will be noted that they were single wounds advanced in the same manner by the same person who had been subjected to similar treatment by their own exertions. In each case tumor commenced at precisely the same point as the ordinary sarcoma, namely, the outer side of the lower arm; and the patient had herself noticed the injurious effects of the scratch of the coarse soap upon where the tumor first appeared.

How the Noble Baron Takacs Made Me a Bankrupt.

Sworn Testimony of Carlotta Hart, of Cleveland, Who is Now Very Sorry She Became Baroness Takacs.

QUESTION—You are Madame Carlotta Takacs de Kis-Joka?

ANSWER—I am. We were married in Rome on November 25, 1903.

Q—But you are not now living with your husband?

A—I am not. I left him on account of the means he took to get my father to pay his debts.

Q—Kindly relate the circumstances.

A—Two weeks after our marriage we were stopping in London with my father and mother. There had been several persons to see my father in order to have him pay my husband's debts. The Baron's brother, an officer in the Austrian army, was one. Another was a money lender, Mr. Kaiser. One afternoon my parents my husband, his brother, Mr. Kaiser and myself were having luncheon. A final appeal was made to my father to meet the Baron's debt, and there was a final refusal. The Baron's brother was so angry he arose, and, swallowing a glass of wine, bit a piece out of the wineglass and then smashed the glass on the floor. After that my husband went out and bought some powder. That evening he came to our room, and throwing himself upon the bed, said he was going to commit suicide; that he had taken one powder. He took another when our backs were turned. He bade us good-bye, saying it was his last moment on earth, and that my parents should have saved him from ruin. I called a doctor at once. My husband was taken to another room, where he was attended by the physician.

Q—What effect did the attempt at suicide have upon you?

A—I was terrified.

Q—How long were you up that night?

A—Most of the night. I watched my husband for fear he would take more poison. I gave him coffee and attended to him.

Q—What occurred the next morning?

A—The next morning my husband brought me some papers to sign. He did not tell me what they were, but said they were papers a wife had to sign, as it was the law of his country. I signed them, and they proved to be the blank notes to Mr. Kaiser, and later were filled in for $50,000.

Q—Were you mentally or physically capable of transacting any business that morning?

A—No, I was not.

Q—Did you consult your parents?

A—No. My husband told me not to say anything to them about the papers I had signed, as there was no use of annoying them with a matter that was between ourselves only.

Q—Is Mr. Kaiser your only creditor?

A—I believe so.

Q—When in Rome did you own any property?

A—No, I did not possess any property.

Q—Any jewelry?

A—Yes. A bracelet, two rings and a necklace.

Q—Have you the bracelet with you?

A—Yes.

(Laboriously and with seeming regret she unlatched the bracelet and handed it over. In succession, the rings and the necklace were also given to Mr. Kaiser's attorney.)

Q—What is this bracelet worth?

A—About $100. It was purchased in Geneva, Italy, and given to me.

Q—Where did you get the rings?

A—They were purchased in Vienna and given to me by my father.

Q—Did you have a letter of credit in Europe?

A—Yes, one for $500.

Q—Didn't you use a letter of credit for $10,000 to buy a string of pearls?

A—Never. I never owned a string of genuine pearls.

Q—Was this pearl necklace a present?

A—Oh, no; I bought that. I was shopping in Paris one day. It struck my fancy and I bought it.

Q—Do you remember the price?

A—Oh, dear, yes! I paid twenty francs, or $4. They are imitation.

Q—You have the wedding ring your husband gave you?

PUZZLE for 1904

COPYRIGHT, 1904 & THE AMERICAN JOURNAL - CHICAGO

It all depends upon your choice for President of the United States whether you will find this interesting puzzle difficult to solve or not.

First cut out the square, carefully following the outside line, and begin folding in or out along the dotted lines until you have completed the portrait of one of the Presidential candidates. If he is your favorite candidate, then the other two candidates, whose pictures are also to be found by folding the paper, must be folded underneath, with your own candidate on top. In solving the puzzle you must fold along the dotted lines only.

HOW MANY APPLES? COUNT AND SEE.

"Now I'll show you a trick," said Tommy Smiles, the clown, as he tossed the ringmaster an apple. "He has now twice as many apples as I have. If Mr. Ringmaster will kindly pass me two of his apples—thank you—I have just as many apples as he has. Can any bright boy or girl say how many apples we have altogether?"

CRYING AND SLEEPING TWIN DOLLS

A PAIR OF BEAUTIES

FLORODORA

THIS LOVELY PAIR of twin sister dolls, Florodora and Bedelia, are the new arrival from faraway doll-land, and are real beauties, nearly

One and One-third Feet Tall.

Florodora is the new wonder blond doll, with bisque head, curly hair, lace-trimmed dress, hat, ribbon sash, etc. Full the spring and Florodora cries in a very natural baby manner.

Bedelia is a handsome brunette sleeping beauty doll, with automatic closing eyes, dark curly ringlets, bisque head, lace-trimmed dress, hat, shoes, stockings, etc., complete. Goes to sleep the same as any tired baby.

Girls, would you like to own Florodora and Bedelia, the pretty twin sister dolls, for a little pleasant work after school hours? If so, write us at once and we will mail to your address, postage paid, twenty assorted fancy articles to dispose of at ten cents each. When sold, remit us the money (two dollars) and we will promptly forward you this handsome pair of twin sister dolls, also a Ladies' Chatelaine as an extra present. Remember, you will receive the two dolls, Florodora and Bedelia, and the Chatelaine, for disposing of only twenty articles at ten cents each. Girls, send for the twenty fancy articles at once to the

WHERE THE WRECKERS GO ASHORE

Whiskey Lures Men to Destruction To-day, Through the False Appearance of Light and Warmth, as the Wreckers Lured the Ships in Olden Times.

ANOTHER talk about whiskey; its deadly work, the great harm that it does. Read this patiently, be thankful if the advice and the lesson do not apply to you, and hand both on to others badly in need of them.

You know how the wreckers worked in the days gone by. With false lights they lured ships to the rocks, then killed and robbed those whom they pretended to save.

Whiskey is THE GREAT WRECKER. Many millions of human beings are led on to destruction, cleverly and deceitfully, by the alcohol that ruins judgment, while it develops the fatal craving.

With this beginning of the cold season there comes a new set of whiskey arguments—the Winter set, or cold-weather set.

The poor devil who can't leave whiskey alone now takes his drink with the mumbled explanation that he needs it to keep out the cold.

He might much better light a match and hold it to his finger. That would burn only the outside, instead of burning the inside, and attacking, first of all, the machinery of thought.

The whiskey is taken with the old foolish, customary remark about "Happy days," or "Good health," and the man goes out, just so much nearer to the end of HIS happy days and to the end of HIS good health.

The foolish whiskey drinker imagines that alcohol really keeps out the cold, that it really helps him. It does nothing of the kind. It deceives him by sending the blood to his brain, starts within him an artificial fire which burns at the expense of permanent vitality.

When that goes out, as it soon does, leaving him colder than before, there is another chilly feeling and the demand for another drink—and so it goes, until that particular human ship goes ashore in the same old rocky place.

Nearly All Men
WANT to Give Up Whiskey
How Can They Do It? A Few Suggestions.

The man who is a slave to physical force suffers within himself. The blows fall on him alone. It is not so with the whiskey slave. He suffers, it is true, but he finds occasional forgetfulness, and while his brain is crouched he has his moments of exaltation and recompense.

There is no such forgetfulness for those near him. Ah! when he knows himself, he is horrified and ashamed because of his awful part in the sufferings of those that have not deserved it. The blows fall upon his wife and children. Hungry, fevered, dependent, badly clothed, badly housed, meet him when he comes back from the delirium of whiskey into real life.

The disgrace that falls upon him is felt more keenly by his wife and his children.

No man knows the struggles drunkards have made before giving in and going down helplessly at last. It has been said truly that the virtuous man, who sees a drunkard falling into the gutter, has probably never in his life made as hard an effort to better himself as that drunkard has made.

Whiskey and circumstances are stronger than the individual will—that is the story—and the will is attacked first of all. It is easy to criticize and customary to despise the drunkard. It is so easy to pass by on the other side and look down upon the man, whose weakness happens to be different from your own. Perhaps the world would be better off if more of us looked at the problem from the side of the man who drinks and tried to help him instead of telling him how low he has fallen.

How can a man be freed from the clutch of whiskey? Obviously the shortest, simplest way would be to do for him in A GOOD HELPFUL WAY that which whiskey does for him IN A VILE AND DESTRUCTIVE WAY.

Nine-tenths of all drunkenness is based on poverty, worry, the mental weariness that comes of hopeless struggle against material conditions. Free the world from poverty and you will lessen the hold of whiskey upon millions.

Fortunately, that is the glorious work which a slowly advancing civilization is doing, and it can truly be said that the present day is temperance itself compared with the past. Take away worry from men and you will take the desire for drink from a great majority of them.

Next in number to the great army of drunkards who drink for the sake of forgetfulness are those who drink because they crave EXCITEMENT and because they lack satisfactory mental occupation.

Idleness accounts for much drunkenness. This is proved by the great number of idlers spending ill-earned money that they drink to excess.

If the man that finds it hard to resist drinking "because life is dull" would force himself into some kind of occupation—something to keep him going all the time—he could forget the craving for drink eventually.

Lack of excitement in life is one great cause of drink abuses. Take the average drunkard on an expedition to the North Pole, where there is danger and an opportunity for individual action, and that man with something worth while, some timidity, to occupy him, would give up drink and be come sane.

The "k" of rational amusements on Sunday accounts for a great deal of drunkenness. In the big cities hundreds of thousands of young men find themselves idle on one day of the week, with nothing new, interesting to do. The saloon welcomes them and drunkenness begins with friendly conversation and Sunday talk—close to a whiskey bottle.

The bicycle was a great promoter of sobriety and health. A revival of its popularity would be an excellent thing for the country.

Wholesome Sunday sports of all kinds, outdoor occupations, and especially opportunities for rational Sunday recreation in the city, would lessen the hold of whiskey considerably.

Every drinking man who feels that whiskey is getting too strong for him SHOULD STUDY HIS OWN INDIVIDUAL CASE. He should try especially to discover substitutes for the excitement of whiskey in other occupations. When his nerves crave alcohol—or when he thinks that they crave it—he should make up his mind to give in on something else. If the man who feels that he MUST have a drink in the morning will take two or three glasses of hot milk he will no longer want to drink.

If the man who feels that he must have something to drink before he eats will control that desire, eat his food slowly, and eat plenty of it, he will discover at the end of the meal that the craving for alcohol is gone.

Famously of those who drink mistake simple hunger for a desire to drink whiskey. Postponing the drink and suffering the pang of hunger, or a bit of it, will diminish the whiskey craving, if we run it a-rougher.

The drunk man, as a matter of fact, must find his salvation WITHIN HIMSELF. He WANTS TO LOSE WEIGHT. Each of us does whatever he WANTS TO LOSE WEIGHT.

The moment a man really WANTS not to drink, the moment he wills not to be drunk, but he must help the will intelligently. The drinking man says that life is dull. He himself is all that he knows of life, his own experience is all that HE possesses.

He would not think his life dull if he were in danger of losing every minute from the attack of some savage Indian or a beast.

How can it be dull when he has constant before him the specter of destruction threat, an enemy inside of himself? He ought to find interesting occupation in devising plans to get the better of whiskey.

He ought to find the excitement that he lacks in making a successful fight against the power that has destroyed millions.

To young men we say: Keep away from whiskey. Its friendships are false. Its artificial warmth ends in cold destruction. It means failure, disaster, SHAME.

One of the greatest whiskey manufacturers in the world was asked if he had any difficulty in keeping his employees from drinking whiskey. He owns one of the most famous of the popular "brands."

"No," said he, "there is no danger of my people drinking whiskey—THEY KNOW THIS STUFF IS POISON."

A FAIR ATHLETE OF COMMONWEALTH AVENUE

Berkshires Gay With Smart Bostonians—Lenox Season at Its Height. Entertainments Numerous.

Boston Society Interested in October Weddings—Many Returning From the North Shore.

BOSTON society for the past week devoted itself almost exclusively to weddings and will do so for the next two weeks. The wedding that have taken place and are to come are all very smart affairs, the brides and bridesmaids, the maids of honor, the ushers and even the little flower girls are from the most exclusive of the Boston families, and the wedding themselves call for most fashionable entertainments.

The week has been marked by many returns from the shore and abroad. Society is still loath to break away from the country for this is the most beautiful time of the year in New England. Many have returned because of the opening of the horse and colic. Others returning come from abroad, where they have been all summer.

Lenox attracts a number of the smart set. In fact, never before in the history of the place has there been such a number of Boston people there for the Fall. Boston is represented in all the affairs, no matter what their nature may be. Hunt runs and dances, horse shows and luncheons all have a full complement of Boston people, and not only do they attend, but they give a number of the affairs themselves.

Virginia Hot Springs claims some of the numbers of local society. Those that are there are representative people and are doing much to enliven the season.

The first of this week comes one of the most important weddings of the year. Trinity Church, which since Martin's wedding, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. H. Adams, has been the scene of many of the smartest weddings of the city. The bride is Miss Mary Adams, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. H. Adams, and the groom is Mr. John Adams, son of Mr. and Mrs. J. H. Adams. The wedding was celebrated at Trinity Church, and the reception was given at the home of Mr. and Mrs. J. H. Adams.

Another wedding of note is that of Miss Mary Adams, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. H. Adams, and Mr. John Adams, son of Mr. and Mrs. J. H. Adams. The wedding was celebrated at Trinity Church, and the reception was given at the home of Mr. and Mrs. J. H. Adams.

Boston Peace Congress, the Most Important Ever Held in World's History, Adjourns, and Will Meet Again in De Bloch Temple at Lucerne, Switzerland

"Justice More Sacred Than Peace," Says Julia Ward Howe

Written Expressly for the BOSTON SUNDAY AMERICAN.

AT THE time of the Franco-Prussian war, thirty-two years ago, I felt myself constrained to make a great effort to interest women in the "peace" question, on the ground that as mothers of men they know the cost of human life, as men do not know it.

I held large meetings in this country in furtherance of this idea, and went to England, where I went about in many towns holding meetings to this same end.

I also tried to institute an annual Mothers' Day, for which I chose the second of June as being a time when it was very easy to meet, and to have flowers for decorations, and so on. This day has been a good deal observed in various places, and I still hear of it as not entirely in disuse.

I had, in the first instance, published an appeal to women throughout the world to unite their efforts in behalf of peace. The response to this endeavor, though in some instances very cordial, was by no means what I had hoped for. Many of the women said the advancement of peace, for justice and peace are human, Christian and divine.

This lack of the right response by the women was not to be wondered at as women generally were but little in the habit of meeting in considerable numbers with a view to concerted action.

MRS. JULIA WARD HOWE.

My work in this direction was interrupted by a residence of two years in Europe.

On my return I found the questions of the higher education and suffrage so pressing that they claimed my attention much during the years that followed.

In these thirty-two years the advance made by women, both in intellectual activity and in administrative ability, seems almost miraculous, and the great meetings of women the past week in the interests of peace bear witness to this astonishing progress.

I can only emphasize what I have said before, that there is one word more sacred than peace; this word is justice.

It was Emerson who said "Justice is the rhyme of things." It is the noble impulse in men to resist and protest against wrong of any kind.

The tribunal at The Hague should represent the interest of justice with peace, for justice and peace are human, Christian and divine.

Julia Ward Howe.

Belgian Statesman Expects a National Congress to End War

BY HON. HENRI LA FONTAINE, President of the Belgian Senate.

Three results are among the probabilities of achievement by the thirteenth Peace Congress, just closed. The first is the calling of a congress of nations, which will probably be called very soon. This congress will take up several matters suggested by the Peace Congress, noticeable among which will be the disarmament of nations.

Another point will be additional impetus given the movement for a new peace convention as suggested in the report regarding the call by the United States Government since we have been in session here.

The third result will be a tendency towards a final cessation of armament in the United States—the tendency to stop building expensive battleships and firearms.

Mead Says Congress Checked Militarism

By Edwin D. Mead, Secretary Peace Society.

In my opinion one of the most important results of the recent Peace Congress has been its usefulness in checking the military tendencies of this country.

These results are among the probabilities of achievement by the thirteenth Peace Congress, just closed. The first is the calling of a congress of nations, which will probably be called very soon.

Influence Useful Says Dr. Trueblood

By Rev. B. P. Trueblood, Secretary Peace Congress.

The Peace Congress just adjourned is more valuable as a great public demonstration of growing interest in the matter of abolition of war and final peace between nations, than as a meeting that has accomplished definite, tangible results.

There are many things that tend towards international peace that may have been accomplished, but I believe that the influence that the Congress has exerted on the minds and hearts of the people will prove eventually to be more valuable than anything else.

There has been a powerful influence exerted in furthering the development of the House Court of Arbitration, and in the actual arbitration of difficulties between nations.

Massachusetts Democrats, in Complete Harmony, Prepare to Sweep State with the Rousing Campaign Slogan of "Douglas and Victory"

"Let Us Work Together, and We Shall Win Together," Says Mayor Collins

By the Hon. PATRICK A. COLLINS, Mayor of Boston.

Written Expressly for the BOSTON SUNDAY AMERICAN.

AS an old observer—and some time campaigner—I can best answer the inquiry of the AMERICAN by saying that the conditions and prospects for Democratic success are, to my vision, far more favorable than in 1876 or in 1884. I was a delegate from this State in 1876, and felt that Tilden was going to be elected. Why? The political "atmospheric pressure." It was in the air. Tilden was elected. I made no figures; I simply knew. In 1884 I was an onlooker—for various reasons—but I felt, and almost knew, that Cleveland would be elected. He was.

Eighteen hundred and ninety-two cannot be compared with either of the other years, because from the start we were bound to win. It was a "tidal wave" like 1874, "and lots of other things"—nothing human or political could have stopped us.

Since the Democrats in New York have put their house in order the prospects for Democratic success are even better than they appeared to me in 1876 or in 1884. At this time in the years 1876 and 1884 the cordial feeling for the candidate that now exists was absent. It took some time to pull the party up to the best fighting mood.

During the last part of this summer there was a feeling of irritation among the Democrats of the Union (except, of course, in Massachusetts) about New York, but all that has disappeared since the outcome of the New York State Convention. The day's work there cleared up the front and back yard and left a good house, with a breeze of Democracy blowing through it.

The South is solid, sane and safe; and with New York sure, we can cover the fighting ground—and it is a small area—with confident hope. We not only can win, but we shall win, if the right work is put in, and I feel it will be.

MAYOR PATRICK A. COLLINS.

Though tied down here officially, I am doing all I can in many directions to assist, for my heart is in it and I feel that it is not only expedient and desirable, but necessary for the integrity of the Republic that we should win.

If we keep drifting away from the moorings—and insensibly but progressively we are doing it—this Republic will be as utterly transformed as Rome was.

More than nine-tenths of our shopkeepers, manufacturers, bankers, lawyers and farmers express contempt for politicians, journalists and agitators. I belong, in a sense, to all three, for it has been my lot to be somewhat in public life. I am a lawyer by profession, and I plead guilty to having written for the press. I think we all three stand guard, full armed, at the temple of liberty. "For what avail the flag or sail, if freedom fail?"

It has been my pleasure to know many of the Democratic candidates for the presidency from 1876 to the present hour. On the wrong side of sixty years, with all reasonable ambitions satisfied, having got all I have ever deserved and, perhaps, more, too, I can say, with all sincerity, that the country will lose a great President if it fails to elect Alton B. Parker and if it fails the country will still, as a Tory premier said, "blunder on," but this country will exist to rue it.

I most heartily congratulate the AMERICAN on the value of the work it has been doing, and as one lone American citizen, I thank its management.

Now that we have all got together let us work together and we shall win together.

Patrick A. Collins

Enlarged, Improved and Convenient, near its old familiar location, is now more attractive and spacious than ever. Here we have made famous

Reliable Linens

Here we propose to add to the lustre of our name for household linens by keeping faith with the housekeepers, selling only the qualities that insure service and satisfaction. Monday and this week will be made memorable for remarkable values in goods of excellence. We note but a few of the items of great interest, but it will be the housekeepers' opportunity. The new feature devoted exclusively to Damask Table Cloths and Napkins will be made notably attractive by the unusual values.

For instance:

PATTERN CLOTHS, old lots, border all round 70 in all, sizes 28x28, 30x30, 32x32, and a few extra large sizes, 36x36, 40x40, 44x44, 48x48, 52x52, 56x56, 60x60, 64x64, 68x68, 72x72, 76x76, 80x80, 84x84, ONE MAN IS KILLED, 2 MAIMED FOR LIFE, IN AWFUL SPEED TEST

Ferocious Flight of the Dare Devils Fraught With Death's Dangers at Every Inch of the Race Course, but Thrilling Spectacle is Cheered by 100,000 in Wild Excitement.

BY A. G. BATCHELDER, EDITOR OF MOTOR.

New York, Oct. 8.—Heath, the American, won because he drove a great race, and it was the driver as much as the car that settled the victory. Clement fought well and made a great race of the contest. His protest, claiming that he had been victimized at the Hicksville control, could not be sustained. The race was a thrilling spectacle.

In the old days, when the Vanderbilt Cup was run, the race was a different affair. The drivers were not so professional. The race was a test of endurance. The drivers were often injured.

Vanderbilt Worked Like a Beaver. Before Vanderbilt did not pass as a modest, unassuming beaver. He was a man of great energy and determination. He worked like a beaver in his business.
